BOARD SUPERVISORS IN SEPTEMBER MEET

SUPT. ED. KELLAR
TO HAVE EXHIBIT AT GULFPORT FAIR

From Hancock County—Wants Rural Schools and Children to Be Well Represented—To Help Celebrate
Nov. 5th—Children's Day.

Hancock county rural schools are going to the Gulf Coast Fair, to be held this fall at Gulfport, states Superintendent of Education T. Ed. Kellar, who has ever evinced an interest to all that pertains to Hancock county and its further progress, and not least of these, the cause of education.

Supt. Kellar has issued to the principals of the various schools and to the patrons of the schools a circular letter, not only inviting each school to participate in the school exhibition as set forth in the catalogue of the fair, but urging everyone to prepare for the big children's day, Nov. 5, when every school in the county is to have a holiday and all children and teachers of the schools are expected to attend the fair. Mr. Kellar calls attention to the fact that the schools made a very good showing last year with little preparation, and he desires that more attention be paid to the exhibits for this year, so that the Hancock schools may take away from the fair their share of the gifts. In discussing his attitude toward the value of the fair, Mr. Kellar stated, "I heartily endorse the fair movement and have always believed that it carried with it educational derived from association and rubbing shoulders

Kellar to Visit Gulfport Soon.
Mr. Kellar states he plans to take a number of the principals of the county with him to Gulfport soon, possibly the latter part of next week, to look over the space allotted to the schools of Hancock county, and then to make plans as to the type of exhibits and the quantity of material to be prepared by the schools. He is not as yet prepared to state whether er there will be separated exhibits by each school or whether the schools will exhibit as a county with the products of each school labeled separately. This matter will be decided by the teachers after their trip to Gulfport.

Mr. Kellar stated to The Echo he plans to make this year's exhibit from Hancock county in the educational line the biggest yet, and he would seek the co-operation of pu-

County agriculture agent, S. F. O'Neal states that his department of the work of the county would be fully represented at the fair, that there had been designated six booths for the use of the community exhibits, and that he believed and confidently hoped that the farmers of the county would be enabled to show through the community exhibits.

one of the finest individual exhibits of the state. He is fully co-operative with the schools in planning the work, of getting the patrons to supply exhibits, will be handled through the schools, so he and Mr. Kellar are working jointly to make this a banner year at the fair with all parts of Hancock represented.

NEW FANCY SHOP FOR BAY ST. LOUIS

BY MRS. J. C. ROLAND

Attractively and delightfully situated in the new Masonic Temple on Main street, Mrs. J. C. Roland, of Bay St. Louis, opened this week a shop that will interest the ladies and others more than ordinarily.

Mrs. Roland, who for the past two or three years has conducted at her

For three years has conducted at her home a department where hemstitching work is done, added to her equipment to do this work. With an additional machine she will henceforth be able to do cord hemstitching, cover buttons, etc. This work in future will be carried out in the new shop besides there will be a gift shop operated in connection.

"There are many little dainties and restrictions I am bound to carry away from the place visiting to home, and since Bay St. Louis entertains so many visitors and tourists both winter and summer there, is an excellent demand for such articles," said Mrs. Roland, "and I intend to cater to this trade," she concluded.

Such a gift shop, and a select line of novel and original articles, as Mrs. Roland proposes to carry, will add to Bay St. Louis as a place in which visitors will become interested. The average visitor or traveler is not only a sight-seer, but is a shopper. The shop is part of visiting a place, and in such a shop as Mrs. Roland has opened will indeed have a large appeal and not only to visitors but to home residents as well.

Mrs. Roland will have associated with her the services of Miss Jeanette Straghan, skilled in the use of the needle and whose artistic taste and ability are well known.

The shop is located in the space back of the Peoples' Building & Loan association, and from the side of the building faces the postoffice and beach front, easily accessible, prominently located and a place, no doubt where one will love to visit repeatedly.

Diversified farming has been found advantageous by a man in Dallas county, Texas, who this season decreased his cotton acreage and planted a nice patch of sorghum. While cutting his sorghum the other day he discovered hidden in the field 560 bottles of real beer.

Many suggestions for handling the traffic congestion problem have been made, some of which are helpful; others quite absurd. Will Rogers has offered a solution worth considering: "Keep all the cars that haven't been paid for off the streets."

When a child was born they used to ask if it was a boy or girl, but now when they are grown up they have to ask the same question. Go any day along the beach front and the question arises. Not only God's country, but a free one!

Orville Wright recently declared that many people who have no reason to fly except the desire for a thrill are afflicted with a disease, according to a Canadian newspaper. Some call it by such names as "flyphoid fever," "influenza," and "aerospelas." Mr. Wright suggests "skyatica."

Civil zeal has seldom been shown in a greater degree than was recently exhibited by the chamber of commerce of New Brunswick, N. J. That live organization of go-getters asked the governor to call off further investigation of the murder of Rev. Hall and his choir singer, on the ground that the notoriety resulting therefrom was hurting the town.

All the little boys and little girls who remember the late Harold Lockwood when he was one of the most popular male movie stars, stand up. There are many in Bay St. Louis, for he was a local favorite. One, two, three—My, my! So many? Well, Harold Lockwood, Jr., aged 16, is entering the movies. Now we have the Costellos, Bushmans, Fairbanks and Lockwood in the second generation. Tempus fugit.

Paul Marcellini, of New York, is rejoicing in the fact that he is entitled to an annual vacation with pay. Arrested for speeding, he was given a $50 fine or the alternative of 10 days in jail. He counted out the $50, then put it back into his pocket, saying: "I've got 10 days vacation left: I'll just go to jail and save this fifty."

Our good neighbor across the bay, Pass Christian, predicating the assertion of a building program, published this week, totaling $11,487,000.00, has annexed the city of Delisle, Pine Hills, on Bay St. Louis, and the Isles at Henderson Point, a few adjacent subdivisions for good measure. Why not annex Pass Christian to Bay St. Louis after the completion of the Bay bridge?

For the third time in several months the public school building in Stone county, on the Pearl River county line, was totally destroyed by fire, and incendiaryism is strongly hinted. Moral: All school buildings should be of brick and concrete. This is, as first principle, due the children.

The Mississippi Gulf Coast is to be represented in Atlantic City at the annual beach pageant by "Miss Blixot," in the person of Miss Mabel Riley. Blixot sends an annual entrant to the national event, through the activity and instrumentality of a live and progressive Chamber of Commerce a la Anthony Ragson.

It is generally understood the Illinois Central Railroad company, running from Chicago into Gulfport, just outside the eastern city limits of Beautiful Bay St. Louis, will do considerable advertising for the coming winter season. In fact, it is understood musical parties will be given on the Mississippi Gulf Coast, and the company will be giving away a lot of money to the poor.

WHAT MISSISSIPPI NEEDS.

(Editorial New York Sun, Aug. 27)

Mississippi has sent forth a caravan of its citizens under leadership of its Lieutenant Governor, Dennis Murphree, to invite men with energy and money to invest them in its development. They are now in this town. They do not need to expiate on the natural resources of their land. It lies in the rich Mississippi Valley, is well watered and has a long growing season. Its surface is comparatively level and it has numerous streams and railroads; communication is easy. On the Father of Waters its products may be floated to the Gulf, thence to the east and north to the Atlantic seaboard and Europe and to the south to eastern South America and to the west through the Panama Canal to the countries that border the Pacific. Nature has done handsomely by the state of Mississippi.

Notwithstanding its natural advantages Mississippi has not made the material advance its people desire. It doubled in population from 1870 to 1920. In the same period Florida quintupled its population. Mississippi has not made startling advance in the number of inhabitants in six years; nobody dares guess how many Florida has put on in that period.

Man has not been as helpful to Mississippi as nature has been. For years the state's lawmakers felt it their duty to hold capital to iron discipline according to requirements of their own devising. They made it irksome to do business in the state, and capital, ever sensitive, took itself elsewhere, developing other communities to their profit and its own. Where opportunity invited men took money and put it to work and other men went along to get the money thus planted and the profits it made possible. Mississippi was passed by.

New York's visitors from Mississippi are here to assure us that their state has abandoned its attitude of antagonism to capital and invites money and its owners to come aboard, assured they will be fairly treated. The Magnolia delegates seek the key to unlock the treasure chest they know they possess. That key is confidence, and when it is in the hands of those who can use it the future will be bright for Mississippi.

UNFAIR TO THE SOUTH.

An unfortunate note of sectional discord was struck recently in a pamphlet circulated in New England, which warned that section of the efforts of the South to secure industries now operating in the East.

Strange to say, the pamphlet was issued by the Tennessee River Improvement association, favoring the bid of the American Cyanamid company for Muscle Shoals, in support of the claim that acceptance of that proposal by Congress would be of great benefit to New England.

At the same time it was pointed out that the acceptance of the bid of the Alabama Power company and associates, which was approved by a joint committee of Congress, would result in a further loss of New England's industries to the South. Along with the pamphlet were copies of advertisements of several southern power companies which are endeavoring to secure new industries for the section which they serve, these being circulated to emphasize the warning contained in the pamphlet.

Urging support for the Cyanamid bid, the pamphlet gave several points to show how the New England states would benefit by its acceptance, from which the following are quoted:

"A larger production of raw cotton at lower cost. Better competitive conditions for New England's mills in the world market. Use of large southern water powers for benefit and advantage of New England, instead of competing with her manufacturers."

That such arguments should be put forth by an organization which is supposed to be working for the benefit of the South is strange. Its object appears to be to insure that the South shall continue to raise enormous crops of cotton to be sold to New England mills at a low price, instead of bringing mills to the South to manufacture cotton goods near the source of raw materials.

If that would be the real result of acceptance of the Cyanamid company's bid, it might appeal to the people of New England, but it would hardly appeal to the farmers of the cotton belt, or to those who desire to see the industrial upbuilding of the South continue.

On the other hand, if it is true that acceptance of the bid of the Alabama Power company and associates would mean the securing of many more industrial plants for the South, as the pamphlet suggests, that bid is more likely to be favored by the cotton states.

The effort to raise a sectional issue over Muscle Shoals is unfortunate, but inasmuch as Muscle Shoals is located in the South, the South should have its share of the benefits to be derived from the great project. It is unfair to expect the South to stand in the way of its own legitimate industrial development.

CHANNEL SWIMMERS.

This was a good season for those with ambitions to swim the English Channel, three of whom were successful, two of them being American women. Several others missed victory only by short distances.

All three of this year's successful aspirants swam the Channel in less time than had been taken by either of the five who had accomplished the feat in former years. These are their records:

Miss Gertrude Ederle, of New York, the first woman to conquer the Channel, crossed in 14 hours, 31 minutes. Mrs. Clemington Corson, Danish-American swimmer of New York, mother of two children, made the time about 15 hours. Ernest Vierkotter, a German baker, broke all records by accomplishing the feat in 12 hours, 42 minutes.

Among those who attempted the Channel swim this year was Miss Clara Belle Barrett of New Rochelle, N. Y., whose brave though unsuccessful effort won universal admiration. She battled wind and tide for 22 hours before she was forced to give up after almost reaching her goal, a victim of sheer hard luck. She had perhaps expended far greater strength than those who were fortunate enough to meet success.

Swimming the Channel is more a matter of luck than of skill and endurance, owing to the prevalence of sudden squalls and treacherous currents which can not be guarded against. There are probably a hundred swimmers in the world today who could make the swim under the most favorable conditions, yet only eight persons have accomplished it. Webb in 1875, Burgess in 1911, Sullivan, Tiraboschi and Roth in 1923, Ederle, Corson and Vierkotter in 1926.

Cleanliness may be next to godliness, but it didn't keep two University of Pennsylvania students out of jail. They were arrested when found taking a bath in the home of Judge Starbuck, of Philadelphia, which they had entered without permission.

Swimming across Bay St. Louis locally should become as much a fad and popular as swimming across the English channel. Some fifteen or twenty years ago it was quite a fad to swim across the bay. The late John Leand Henderson did it many a time and women of today, sick of that time, are known to have accomplished the feat. It should be revived, and the feet of youth stimulated with the awarding of prizes by some of the local business houses.

CURRENT COMMENT.

BY REIGUAS.

Christianity.

From New Jersey comes the news that a mother, who for the past seven years has mourned her dead son, today appeals to the governor of the state to pardon that son's murderer that she might adopt him and give him a home.

Foolish woman! did you say? Nay, she is not. She is a true Christian woman, the kind one, journey far and long to find. A woman endowed with the very essence of pure Christianity; so deep as to be almost inconceivable to the ordinary mind of the so-called Christians of these modern times.

"He is an invalid now, and I am willing to accept him as my son and give him a home," said the mother. "He was my boy's pal. I think he has suffered enough for the past seven years."

How many women of today could follow so closely in the footsteps of Christ as to make that statement? Ask the first ten mothers you meet and then go somewhere and think it over, give it the same consideration that St. Paul gave his epistles, then reach your conclusions.

Monkey Business.

Dr. Voronoff is promising the world a lot of stuff a la evolution in the near future. He's going to make the fundamentalists take to cover by a grand expose, so he claims.

Whatever he exposes in the future "for the benefit of science," will not alter the fact that his action is a slur of the deepest hue on the sacredness of creation; and, as has been remarked, it is fortunate for him that he did not live a century ago.

Cold Cash.

Emile Brockett, of New Orleans, got a chill of regret when he discovered that some thief had found the money chest containing $150, which he had hidden in the ice box last Monday night.

It might be called a cold-blooded business, but the fact that it was missing shows conclusively that the robber froze onto it. In these booze fighting times a refrigerator is about the first place that a burglar is apt to look.

Ponce-de-Leon, 1926.

Science is making some rapid strides in every line, and daily there appears some eminent person who advances the pace.

Prof. James F. Norris, of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, is hoping to harness the atoms to supply the world with unbonded energy. "There will be no underground slaves and no coal barons. A limitless supply of this energy will make over the world. Every man will have time to taste the joys of life."

"Sounds good, but when, O, Professor?"

The Ponce-de-Leon of modern times comes in the form of Prof. Bainbridge, of New York, who is seeking a way to combat the poisons thrown off internally by body cells. Success in this line will mean, under proper conditions, an indefinite life, so says the eminent man.

A portion of the heart of a chicken was kept alive for fifteen years by scientists—it must have been a real chick, not the kind we see on Canal street, they wouldn't hold out that long.

Treasure Hunters.

Stevenson's John Silver would be considered a piker were he living in this age of "Treasure Hunters." Nightly one sees swift flying autos with loads of "Pirates" darting hither and thither in a mad scramble for "clues." The expressions seen on these faces would make the famous silver feel perfectly at home.

INTERESTING NOTES.

An electric refrigerator has been installed in the White House kitchen.

There are 25,733 patients under treatment at various hospitals in charge of the Veterans' Bureau, according to a recent report.

M. Callizo, a Frenchman, again broke the world's altitude record by reaching a height of 12,000 meters, exceeding his former record height of 12,066 meters.

Two Cuban aviators successfully completed a flight from Havana to Haiti and return.

Balmoral, a yearling colt recently bought by Count de Rivaud of France, brought the record price of 600,000 francs, the former highest price for a yearling being 450,000 francs.

Expenses of Linton Wells and Edward Evans, in their recent record-breaking trip around the world, reached approximately $40,000, or about $1.60 a mile for the two men.

Hats are said to have been first made in Paris by a Swiss in 1404, but were not made in England until 1510; silk hats not until 1820.

Juan Modesto, of Havana, shot off the ear of a girl who had jilted him.

ABOUT WOMEN.

Mrs. Lettie Sweeney, of Nashville, Tenn., is a licensed embalmer and will open a new mortuary establishment soon.

Miss Marion Turpie, 18-year-old Southern women's golf champion, was at first intended for a musical career, but finally abandoned it for outdoor sport.

Miss Semantha C. Plummer, who is now nearly 70, will shortly retire from active duty as chief of the army nursing corps.

And by the way, happiness is but a state of mind.

WEEKLY HEALTH SUGGESTIONS.

By Felix J. Underwood, M. D., State Health Officer, Mississippi State Board of Health.

Faulty conditions of the nose and throat may profoundly influence dentition. Thus adenoids will interfere with the development of the jaw and produce irregularities of the teeth.

Decay, or caries, of both the first and second dentition is common and very important. The fermentation of carbohydrate materials in food particles lodged between the teeth results in the production of lactic acid, which is a solvent for dentine and enamel. Soft carbohydrate food, rather than hard, tends to lodge in these situations. The vigorous mastication of hard carbohydrate foods will overcome a great deal of this difficulty.

Pyorrhea is an important dental defect, the cause of which is unknown. We do know that the observance of strict cleanliness of the mouth and regular visits to the dentist is a prophylactic measure that we cannot afford to neglect.

Pus pockets about the roots of decaying teeth are of greater importance than their small size and localization would at first indicate. They are one of the most common seats of local infection and a situation from which infective emboli gain access to the circulation and produce disorder elsewhere. Their recognition and elimination is of great importance.

Educated and experienced dentists say that it is advisable to make expensive repairs to the early teeth, as their premature disappearance may unfavorably affect the second dentition that the majority of the criminals and crooks operating in Chicago are some type of mental defective, but chiefly morons, who, on account of their low intelligence and deranged emotions, actually hunger for a criminal career.

Judge Olsen explained the crime situation in Chicago by the fact that the city is a railroad center, and that these defective tramps, hoboes and ne'er-do-wells bum their way over the numerous railways into the city. Being unprepared and unfitted to pursue any legitimate occupation, those who are bright enough are given employment by the crime syndicate. Many of these later are killed by their bosses for the reason that they are unprofitable to the crime organization.

Under the direction of Dr. H. H. Goddard, 100 cases of juvenile delinquency in Newark, N. J., were given the psychological tests which proved that nearly half the number were feeble-minded or of a low order of intelligence. The test of 100 girls at the Ohio state reformatory proved that 36 per cent. were definitely subnormal in intellect.

Dr. Fernald's test of 100 prisoners at the Massachusetts state reformatory showed that 25 per cent. were feeble-minded.

Of 1,186 girls tested at the state industrial school for girls, at Lancaster, Mass., 28 per cent. were found to have subnormal intelligence.

Tests by Dr. J. Harold Williams, given 150 delinquents at the Whittier state school for boys, Whittier, Cal., showed 28 per cent. feeble-minded and 25 per cent. of borderline, or slightly subnormal intelligence.

In our own state, tests applied by Dr. Thos. H. Haines, of the national committee for mental hygiene, show that 10 per cent. of our industrial school population and 25 per cent. of our state prison population are feeble-minded, and such are classed as delinquents and criminals on account of mental defect. Investigations are now in progress in most of the progressive states, and while there may be some discrepancy as to the actual percentage, no investigator will deny the fearful role played by mental deficiency or feeble-mindedness in the production of delinquency, vice, dependency and crime.

Charitably inclined persons would do well to scrutinize crippled beggars before contributing to their relief, if a report from New York may be credited. It is said that the metropolis now has a flourishing "cripple factory," where people who prefer begging to working are made to appear deformed or crippled through a skillful use of padding and bandages. A "lone-armed" beggar recently arrested was found to have two perfectly good arms, but one of them was strapped to his body underneath his shirt.
